Anchor Comprehension Workshop

Provide strategy-based instruction and intervention with consistent resources at the right levels.

Target 17 key comprehension strategies based on the new standards.

- Pre-assess, monitor progress, and confirm mastery.
- Use whole-group and small-group resources to model and instruct.
- Guide practice and application of strategies in books.
- Extend and personalize learning with e-resources.

Trace Fossils

Have you ever walked through mud? If so, you probably left behind footprints. If left undisturbed for thousands of years, your footprints would eventually become trace fossils. Trace fossils are the traces of living things captured in rock.

Some of the most common trace fossils are tracks. Animals' feet made the tracks that became fossils. Sometimes animals left an entire path of footprints leading to a certain place. Tracks show us where animals traveled and how they moved. Other trace fossils, called trails, look like curvy, carved lines in rock. Legless creatures, such as worms, left these lines. Trails provide information about animal size and weight.

Many animals from long ago found ways to protect themselves and their young. They dug burrows into mud, wood or stone. How do we know this? The burrows are trace fossils, too.

Stated Main Idea: Trace fossils are the traces of living things captured in rock.

Details:
- Animals' feet made the tracks that became fossils.
- Other trace fossils, called trails, look like curvy, carved lines in rock. Legless creatures, such as worms, left these lines.
- Some animals dug burrows into mud, wood or stone. These burrows became fossils, too.

"In a market flooded with isolated skill and drill, Anchor Comprehension Workshop stands out as research-based, scientifically validated instruction that promotes real reading and authentic application. Everything is clearly organized for teachers to easily find resources targeted to a specific reading strategy. So many of the nonfiction titles parallel our social studies and science curriculums—an added bonus."

—Coordinator of RTI and Intervention, North Penn (PA) School District

4 EASY STEPS
for Teaching Text-Based Comprehension

Students learn metacognitive and comprehension strategies together!

Grades K–6

1. Pre-assess students to determine instructional needs.

Sample Strategy: Identify Main Idea and Supporting Details
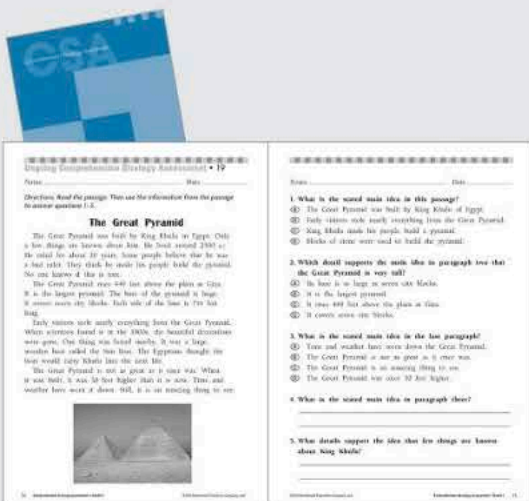

Get a snapshot of students' comprehension mastery on all the grade-level target strategies.

Online Assessment Benefits

- NEW data-driven assessment with lessons that reteach as appropriate
- Question items validated and aligned with the new standards
- Student data-syncing services included
- Reporting by classroom, grade, school, and district

2. Teach strategies through explicit mini-lessons.

Poster 1/Side 1: Introduce and model strategies.

Build strategy awareness and oral language by relating the strategy to visual information.
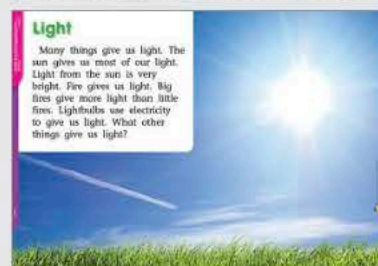

Poster 1/Side 2: Guide practice using a new passage.
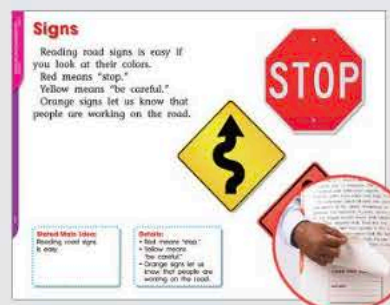

Collaborate with students to practice the strategy. Annotations on the poster may be concealed with the provided clings.

Poster 2/Side 1: Apply and practice.
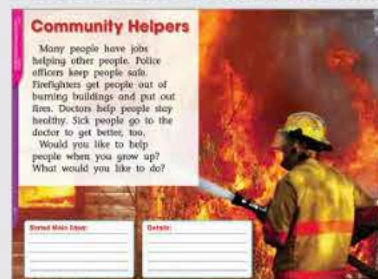

Challenge students to analyze the text using the comprehension strategy.

Poster 2/Side 2:
Link strategy introduction to authentic test preparation.

Ask students to analyze a text and answer text-dependent comprehension questions by applying the target comprehension strategy.

3. Apply strategies during small-group reading.

Sample Titles: Identify Main Idea and Supporting Details

Teacher's Guide for Every Title!

Every Teacher's Guide has an explicit comprehension strategy lesson that extends the poster instruction.
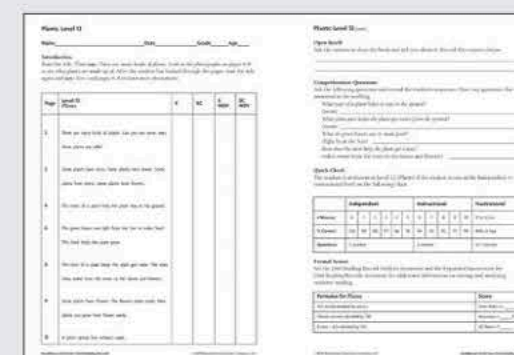

4. Monitor progress and post-assess to inform instruction and document improvement.

Anchor Comprehension Workshop™

Key Strategies Taught Consistently and Sequentially at Each Level

5-Day Lesson Plan with Extensive Support for Whole-Group and Small-Group Instruction

Day One · Day Two · Day Three · Day Four · Day Five

Target comprehension strategies by grade level.

Answer Text-Dependent Comprehension Questions:
Analyze Story Elements (Level 3: Prove It!)

Say: Sometimes you need to answer questions about a passage you've read. And some questions require you to analyze story elements. Today we're going to read and answer questions about story elements.

Distribute BLM 5 and read Question 1 together. ("Who is a character in the story?")

Ask: What strategy do you think we need to use to answer this question? If students can't tell you, say: Is it asking us to identify a sequence? Is it asking us to compare? What strategy will we need...
